Education is our business

The merger of educational expertise and technology

The Vox Factum software is formatted to teach elementary and high school students, how to understand academic text material by practicing information processing skills for 20-minute sessions. Our experienced and Ministry certified teachers are able to monitor and adjust the program activities in response to the performance of the students.

The Summer 2011 Skill Building Program

Vox Factum is pleased to announce a computer based summer academic enrichment program.

The program will begin during the week of July 4th and end on the 12th of August.

The core activities of the lessons are note and test taking activities. The primary purpose of these activities is to shift the students' language processing skills so they can express their true potential in their academic performance.

This summer tutoring program can be accessed through the Internet and is therefore available: at home, in a school or camp, or even at the cottage.

Students are given the opportunity to complete two 20-minute lessons a week, at any time of day. Scorecards are provided after each lesson and are reviewed weekly by our teaching staff for ongoing support.

The program offers a scoreboard feature with built in prizes for participation and completion of the lessons.

Standardized achievement pre- and post-program assessments are also available upon request.

The software is easily accessed using a PC with Microsoft Windows XP, Vista or 7.

The cost is $195.

For further information or to enroll a student, please contact our program director, Lawrence Feld M.Ed. at 416-576-5936 or by email at enrolment@voxfactum.com.
