Education is our business

The merger of educational expertise and technology

Vox Factum would like to introduce you to a unique tutoring program for your school. It combines computer tutoring of core academic skills: listening, reading, note taking, studying, and test taking with teacher supervision and monitoring.

The combination of computer software and expert teacher input and reporting makes our program, VFTutor, effective and affordable.

The software is formatted to teach students from elementary to high school how to understand academic text material by practicing these skills for 20 minute sessions. Our experienced and Ministry certified teachers are able to monitor and adjust the program activities in response to the performance of the students.

VFTutor can be installed on any computer and can be utilized in the resource room, classroom, or home setting to either develop critical academic literacy skills or to prepare students for testing events such as the EQAO and Literacy Test. It has also been proven to be effective as part of an ESL program.
